

Head 'Round Budd Lake

Looking for something to do while in Harrison? Take a leisurely 4.2-mile ride or walk around Budd Lake. The 175-acre lake is a favorite for those who like to be on the water, but it's also a great place to simply walk or ride, thanks to the sidewalks and quiet streets that surround it.

Wilson State Park is a great starting point, although you can also park at one of the various businesses and restaurants in the city of Harrison. Although the trip is along smooth sidewalks and roads, it's not always level. There are a few places where the road rises about 30 feet about the lake, which means you do have to work—but only a little. It's still a good activity for families with children. Have fun and if you ride, wear a helmet!

Wilson State Park runs along the northwest side of Budd Lake.

A depth map is at the boat launch at the south end of the lake.

This home was once owned by one of the Wilson Brothers who had a sawmill here and for whom Wilson State Park is named.

Saxton park just south of Wilson State Park is a good place to fish and picnic. No bikes allowed in the park that is on the water, though because of the steep grade.

There are number of places along the ride where you can stop.

Hillcrest is one of the quiet residential streets you will travel.
